The color codes can be opened in an image editor and can be easily assigned to an image for a fully custom color image. A special feature of ColorGrabber is its sophisticated, fully-customizable skin. You can alter the main window color, font, window border, buttons, scrollbars, the mouse cursor, even the title bar text. The tool also has a Loupe which lets you easily inspect the color. To save a color code, simply click the 'Grab' button, select the color you wish to grab and click 'Grab.' Import or export color codes via the 'Import/Export' button. The 'History' window shows the color codes that were grabbed. The 'Settings' window allows you to specify the color code units that you wish to save in the 'Units' field. Click 'OK' to save. The 'Open...' button will open the 'Pick' window where you can load the image and color code. You may change the color units to HEX, RGB, LAB or BG2. Both the 'Grab' and 'History' windows can be minimized.

Easy to get started with and even easier to work with Getting started with this simple app is hardly challenging since you only need to download it, unzip its package and launch it via its executable file. Right off the bat, you are bound to discover the app's compact main window and non-impressive and slightly-outdated tabbed interface. Although the interface is not what you would call eye-candy, it does sport a novice-accessible layout. This said, there are four tabs with self-explanatory names, Grab, History, Settings, and About. Effortlessly and accurately grab colors with the help of the Loupe function The first tab is the place where you will spend most of your time while working with ColorGrabber since it allows you to instantly grab colors and view their codes. Just hover with the pointer over the area with the color you desire and hit 'CTRL+S.' It is noteworthy that, for an added degree of accuracy, the app provides you with a straightforward, yet highly efficient Loupe function, easily accessible via the 'CTRL+A' keyboard shortcut. Make a list with the most used colors Before we go further, we should point out that these keyboard shortcuts are not fixed, as they can be changed from the Settings section. Every grabbed color will be saved within the History tab, from where you can easily copy the codes to your computer's clipboard and even rename them. Lastly, you should know that the application allows you to import and export Hex color code values. To do this, simply right-click any saved color code from the History tab. Simple, efficient, lightweight and very user-friendly color grabber All in all, ColorGrabber is a simple
